2009/81 #51		[Airplane crash site] [Airplane crash site at night. Snow is on the ground.] [Additional information provided by Rolf Hougen in 2011:] Rolf Hougen was asked, as a photographer, to walk across frozen Marsh Lake to a Canadian RCAF plane crash to take photographs. But his camera froze up and the lens would not work in the extreme cold. He took flash shots from either side, but didn't develop them for some time, thinking that the attempt was a failure. The bodies of the men who died in the crash had already been recovered, put in a van and taken to Whitehorse. - 195-?.
