

YUKON ARCHIVES LEGACY SOUND RECORDINGS OUTLINE

---

[Interview with Ted Parnell by Janice Hamilton]

Notice - The accuracy of this legacy sound recordings outline cannot be guaranteed due to one or more of the following factors:

- The format and contents of the document may not be at our current standard
- Location codes may have changed
- Material may have been added or removed
- The document may be incomplete
- Descriptive language may have changed

We are providing the following digitized sound recordings outline as a source of additional information about the Janice Hamilton fonds, as it may still be useful as a tool in your research. Please contact the Yukon Archives Reference Service for further information or assistance (867-667-8061 or yukon.archives@gov.yk.ca).

This page intentionally left blank.

Janice Hamilton Interview with Ted Parnell (Author: Disposable Native)

- 007 Book describes living conditions of registered Native and Metis people in Alberta and tries to describes some of the reasons for this situation at the time of the interview.
- 010 TP explains reasons for choice of title: "Disposable Native"
- 018 TP describes living conditions of Native people in Alberta and reasons for those conditions
- 028 TP proposes suggestions and strategies for improving living conditions.
- 051 TP discusses costs of changes
- 060 TP describes how he came to write book and the research and writing process
- 080 TP discusses problems of being a white person researching native people
- 090 TP argues that traditional Native culture is not incompatible with progress and development.
- 112 TP discusses use of term "underdevelopment of Native people"
- 132 TP discusses similarities and differences of living conditions and experience of Native people in southern and northern Canada
- 168 TP discusses reaction to book from Natives and whites
- 179 End of Tape

See Also: Ted Parnell, Disposable Native. Edmonton: Alberta Human Rights and Civil Liberties Association, 1976.