WHITEHORSE, YUKON

WHITEHORSE - YUKON

Over the door of the National Archives Building in Washington are written these words: The Past Is Prologue. Long ago a humourist observed that those words really mean: "You haven't seen anything yet"

At this time in the history of Whitehorse we too can say you haven't seen anything yet. The future is bright just as our past is colorful and distinguished.

Whitehorse is the capital, commerce and transportation center of the Yukon. With a population of over 11,000 the City is a mid-point on the Alaska Highway and railhead of the White Pass & Yukon Railway—the auto-and-passenger rail link between Alaska's Ferry System and the Alaska Highway. A modern airport provides jet-age travel connections. Situated on a river-level shelf of land bordering a wide bend in the Yukon River, Whitehorse is reached by a two-mile paved side road from the bluff's overlooking the city.

Whitehorse's role as a transportation center is as new as the jet age and as old as the Gold Rush of '98. The City came into existence during the Klondike Gold Rush when men first camped on the banks of the Yukon River, as it was the head of river navigation. The sparsely populated tent-and-cabin city became the northern rail terminus and the southern terminus of the supply route to the Klondike.

The greatest hazards in river navigation were found in Miles Canyon and Whitehorse Rapids south of the present city. To by-pass these treacherous waters, wooden rail tramways were constructed on both sides of the canyon. On the east side of the river a small settlement of tents and log cabins sprang up, called "Closeleigh". In 1898, the Northwest Mounted Police records show that 7,124 boats with 28,000 persons swept past Closeleigh.

The first settlement, called "Closeleigh" after Close Brothers of England, principal financial backers of the railway, was laid out on the east bank of the Yukon River about opposite the present townsite. On completion of the White Pass Railway the townsite was changed to the present location on the west bank of the river, and given the name Whitehorse after Whitehorse Rapids. There are many versions of how Whitehorse Rapids obtained the name. One is that the white caps on the rapids resembled the manes of white horses, which could be the correct version. For years Whitehorse continued in its role of connecting railhead with riverboat navigation to Dawson City and the Klondike.

Today, Whitehorse reflects progress and prosperity. A $2 million government building was erected in 1954; a modern public school system with five elementary and two high schools; a $4 million dollar hospital in 1957. A beautiful residential section known as Riverdale is rapidly expanding on the opposite side of the river.

The second great period of development and population surge followed the United States Agreement with Canada to build the Alaska Highway during the Second World War. During the nine-month construction period in 1942, area population swelled to 50,000. With building space at a premium, one entrepreneur of the construction trade began building small two and three story log cabins, or "Yukon skyscrapers", as they came to be called.

After the war, Whitehorse maintained its importance as a transportation and communications center. Whitehorse was made the capital of the Yukon Territory on April 1st, 1953, when the seat of the Government was moved from historic old Dawson, in the Klondike. It was created a municipality and incorporated on the 1st of June, 1950, with an elected Council of Mayor and four Aldermen. Subsequently a Federal Building was constructed.

Two newspapers, a private radio station, and CBC radio, two television stations (one closed circuit), two theatres, a library and a museum serve the city. Daily bus and air service are available. There is a modern airport with night landing and aircraft servicing facilities.

In the City of Whitehorse, all the requirements of modern life are available. There are supermarkets which are identical to those in other Canadian cities. The shelves are loaded with all the familiar products in their colorful packages. Piled high in the modern glass backed counters are fresh fruits and vegetables, dairy products and fresh meat. While Northerners accept this as normal, visiting motorists and travellers are always delighted to find they can purchase the same products they buy at supermarkets at their homes.

High fashion is displayed in modern dress shops and the latest hair-do's are created at several beauty parlors. There are jewelery stores, mens and childrens wear shops as well as bakeries, magazine shops, as well as several excellent department stores, up to date automotive dealers and service stations.

There can be no denying that Whitehorse homes have a charm of their own. Their location above the 55th parallel automatically sets them apart from homes situated in southern regions. However, despite this northern setting, there is no shortage of modern home conveniences, besides T.V. sets, modern hi-fi equipment can be seen and heard in hundreds of Whitehorse homes. There are hundreds of automatic washing machines and dryers, and fully automatic oil furnaces. In fact, anything for home uses elsewhere can be found in the capital city of Whitehorse.

BUSY CAR GASOLINES:

MADE FOR BUSY YUKON DRIVERS

Yukoners do a lot of driving. Short trips, especially: A large percentage of Yukoners drive five miles or less. That's why it pays to use Chevron—the gasoline blended especially for Yukon and Western Cars. You get better volatility and more efficiency.

Come in for a tankful of the busy-car gasolines. There are more than 50 Chevron Dealers at Your Service in the Yukon. USE YOUR CREDIT CARD.
