Great News!

With great excitement we announce that due to the generosity of Atlinites and Yukoners, the fundraising effort for a new boiler for the Globe Theatre has been a complete success.

The BBQ and musical evening on July 27th brought in a little over $4000 which is amazing! But the big news is that a gentleman by the name of Hugh Copland happened to hear Heather during her CBC radio interview talking about the fundraiser for the Globe. Stating that he "Loves the Globe and the way that the community has pitched in to keep it running", Mr. Copland decided to offer up his own brand new boiler that he had purchased for his home a few years ago and never, in fact, installed. We are thrilled to be able to accept this offer and together with the money donated, we will be able to insulate the building a bit better, install a new boiler, and have heat on all winter long! And, P.S. Turns out Mr. Copland became fond of the Globe due to his previous stints as a volunteer for the Music Festival!

Many thanks to Heather Keny for organizing everything and all the folks who came out to the BBQ, bought desserts, and tried for the 50/50 jackpot won by Heidi

Thanks to Vince and Marvin and Athea for their donation and the great food.

Thanks to Jane Wilder, Geri Johnson, Heather Keny, Nancy Bayer, and Jeannie Johnson for the wonderful desserts

Thanks to the band, "The Accidentals" Charlie Hunt, Maggie Darcy, Nancy Bayer

Thanks to Jamie Tait - Auctioneer Extraordinaire!

And, thanks to our friends in Atlin & Yukon who have made cash donations, and of course, to Mr. Hugh Copland not only for donating the boiler but delivering it too!

Last but not least, thanks to Lloyd Brown, George Esquiro, Hugh Copland and Robin Urquhart for doing the heavy lifting to move the new boiler into the theatre!

thank you!

Dear Atlin and Area Tourism Partners

Destination British Columbia, together with the Northern BC Tourism, Indigenous Tourism BC and the Ministry Tourism, Arts and Culture, have launched a very collaborative Destination Development planning program which will help guide the long-term development and quality of tourism experiences in Northwestern BC. This is intended to help us continue to grow as a sustainable and competitive tourism destination over the longer-term.

Northwestern BC has been identified as a priority planning area in Northern BC, along with Northeastern BC and Haida Gwaii.

Atlin and area is included in the 10-year Destination Development Strategy for Northwestern BC. You are invited to participate in the September 6, 2018 planning session to help prepare this important strategy.

Following the completion of sub-regional strategies for Northeastern BC, Northwestern BC and Haida Gwaii, there will be a roll-up strategy for Northern BC as a whole. This will form the 10-year Destination Development Strategy for the Northern BC Region. The Regional Northern BC Strategy will also inform and tie into the Provincial 10-year Destination Development Strategy.

The Northwestern BC 10-Year Destination Development Strategy that we are currently developing will outline key tourism assets and set priorities for product development, infrastructure and amenity improvements and investment along the Highway 16 and Highway 37 corridors.

A series of information gathering sessions have been held in Prince Rupert, Terrace, Smithers, Burns Lake, McBride from March 2018 to June 2018. The content will contribute to the framework for the Northwestern BC Destination Development Strategy. Participants participated in a visioning exercise, explored the destination potential and identified goals along with roles and responsibilities. Additional information has been gathered through personal interviews with industry operators and Indigenous community leaders.

Collaboration is necessary to ensure the strategy we develop will enable tourism partners to make well-informed decisions in the future, take advantage of opportunities and allow us to be positioned to address barriers to growth by identifying them early.

Partner Engagement

For this plan to be successful, we need representation from the following groups:

- Destination marketing and management organizations
- Tourism businesses and operators
- Provincial government
- Municipal and regional governments
- First Nations and Indigenous communities
- Local and regional economic development
- Heritage/cultural organizations
- Community groups and associations

Sexual Abuse and Community

By Jan Forde

Abuse of children, and especially sexual abuse, has both deep and wide-ranging impacts. In addition to the very serious impacts on individual survivors, sexual abuse can also have significant impacts on the community as a whole. Much of the violence and addiction which weakens the fabric of community can be directly traced to childhood abuse and trauma.

Child sexual abuse survivors, as well as adult survivors of rape and sexual assault, may experience continual feelings of mistrust, fear and powerlessness. All sense of control can be taken away, all belief in one's strength and personal competency may be shattered, and in some instances, where the offender is a friend or family member, a cruel sense of betrayal enters the mix.

In large part this determines how a victim comes to think about self, family and community. If s/he is left to deal with the pain of sexual abuse all alone (and this is true of any form of child maltreatment) the lesson learned can be – No one cares, I don't matter, something's wrong with me, abuse is the price you pay for relationship – and the list of negative messages goes on and on.

All of this greatly influences how children develop and what they feel they have a right to expect from life. Sexual abuse and assault can rob people of the sense of self-worth and confidence they need to succeed in all chapters of their lives: school, friendships, employment, intimate relationships, parenthood – just about everything. And frequently addictions develop and complicate an already shaky ability to implement positive plans in all these areas.

Fortunately, the harmful impacts of violence, abuse and neglect can all be countered to a significant degree by the kinds of responses a survivor experiences when s/he discloses what happened. This is where we all have an important role to play in people's recovery. A survivor who's believed, supported, protected and comforted will achieve a far brighter outcome than someone who's disbelieved, blamed, or even ridiculed. If the offender is held accountable and the survivor is reassured that blame rests solely with the perpetrator, then a clear message is being sent: sexual abuse is a serious wrong that cannot be tolerated, the survivor can count on others to take appropriate action, and his or her safety and well-being are the primary concerns.

When victim blaming occurs or when silence and inaction is the response to a sexual abuse disclosure, the outcome is quite the opposite. There can be no sense of safety or belonging when sexual abuse is allowed to continue under the cover of silence or denial. How can the victim of sexual abuse regain a sense of self-worth when the offender is allowed to enjoy the on-going acceptance and respect of family, kinship group or community? Victims/survivors are at exceptionally high risk to develop serious addictions or have them grow much worse. They can sink into despair or their lives can spiral out of control when their injury is ignored or unacknowledged. A strong sense of disconnection and abandonment can result. Imagine how it feels, day after day, to be confronted by the reality of your offenders moving about quite freely within the community, perhaps enjoying a quality of life and social status that contrasts sharply with the difficult circumstances you're struggling with.

Fortunately, it's never too late to acknowledge and validate what a victim has gone through, to demonstrate support and genuine caring. It's never too late to hold offenders accountable and to ensure they have no further access to anyone who might fall victim to their offending behaviour. It's never too late to break the silence and address the wrongs of the past. Communities become stronger, safer and more productive when sexual abuse and other violence is addressed head on in healthy ways. To strengthen the bonds of family and community, it's vital that this challenge is taken up and dealt with effectively so that violence and sexual abuse is no longer seen as the norm in people's lives. And it's vital that sexual abuse and other violence be addressed and dealt with collectively, so that the whole community is involved in repairing the damage that's been done. Community based responses help break down the sense of secrecy and disconnection, helping everyone to feel safer and more cared for.

Among both First Nations and non-Native communities, the safety and well-being of children was traditionally viewed as a responsibility shared by everyone. A number of factors, such as urbanization, more transient lifestyles, and the impacts of colonization have worked to undermine that traditional value. With determination and commitment, however, we can fully restore it.

There are good examples out there of communities that have focused their strength and courage on addressing the alarming scope of sexual abuse impacting their children, and that have done so in an open, visible and healthy way. Much can be learned from their experiences, but every community is unique and has to tailor its response according to the particular needs and resources of that community. The important thing is to get the dialogue going, to build motivation to start the process of supporting victims, holding offenders accountable, and repairing broken relationships. In this way, the traditional values of cooperation and mutual support can be more fully realized and brought to bear on all the other challenges we face.

Meanwhile, supportive counselling for sexual abuse survivors can be a beneficial way to begin the healing process.

"Family"

By Jeff Salmon

On a pleasant Sunday in August the family gathered for a picnic in mom and dad's backyard. Uncles and aunts, siblings and cousins came for one of the traditional get-togethers.

Large tables were assembled by impressive shade trees. Platters of food made their way outdoors. Dad's Southern fried chicken, corn on the cob, Aunt Betty's potato salad, my coleslaw, veggies from mom's garden, and pitchers of cold apple cider. The welcome mat was out for all to enjoy the feast and each others company. During the afternoon we shared stories, laughed a lot and relayed news of family who were living far away.

After the tables were cleared mom put up a large pot of coffee and made cold lemonade for the young ones. She warmed up her homemade apple and peach pies and Aunt Jean's poppy seed cake. It was hard to believe anyone had room for dessert and yet somehow we managed to fit it in.

Family was important and most lived fairly close by. Getting together like this helped us stay in touch with each other and keep the bonds strong. Those times made me aware I was part of something bigger than myself.

Nowadays, most of the family live so far apart that get-togethers are rare. There are memories still binding us, although the distance is causing them to fade at the edges. I find I'm growing closer with my neighbors and friends in the community. They have become like family and remind me I am part of something bigger than myself.
